Study: Water

What You Can Do at Home :

- Talk with your child about how water is used during daily routines, such as when
- brushing teeth, washing hands, and cooking. Take a walk around your neighborhood
- and notice the different sources of water, such as re hydrants, water fountains, spigots, sprinklers, and garden hoses. Oer your child opportunities to observe and discuss water
- in its different states (solid, liquid, gas), such as when they see steam on the bathroom mirror or ice in the freezer. is will help develop your child's observation skills and help them make connections between what they are learning at school and things in the community and at home.
